Preface

The Safe Ministry Commission was tasked with assisting the Anglican Church of Australia to respond to the recommendations of the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse.

Recommendation 16.5 of the Royal Commission's Final Report states:

The Anglican Church of Australia should develop, and each diocese should implement, mandatory national standards to ensure that all people in religious or professional ministry (bishops, clergy, religious and lay personnel):

- a. undertake mandatory, regular professional development, compulsory components being professional responsibility and boundaries, ethics in ministry and child safety*
- b. undertake mandatory professional/pastoral supervision*
- c. undergo regular performance appraisals.*

Recommendation 16.44 of the Royal Commission's Final Report states:

Consistent with Child Safe Standard 5, each religious institution should ensure that all people in religious or pastoral ministry, including religious leaders, are subject to effective management and oversight and undertake annual performance appraisals.

Recommendation 16.45 of the Royal Commission's Final Report states:

Consistent with Child Safe Standard 5, each religious institution should ensure that all people in religious or pastoral ministry, including religious leaders, have professional supervision with a trained professional or pastoral supervisor who has a degree of independence from the institution within which the person is in ministry.

The Final Report of the Royal Commission defines pastoral ministry as:

...any form of religious ministry of care or service to a religious community and/or the broader community. This might include administration of the sacraments, hospital or prison chaplaincy, counselling, or outreach to marginalised individuals and communities...

The Final Report of the Royal Commission defines a person in religious ministry as:

...a minister of religion, priest, deacon, pastor, rabbi, Salvation Army officer, church elder, religious brother or sister and any other person recognised as a spiritual leader in a religious institution.

The Safe Ministry Commission recognises that recommendations 16.5, 16.44 and 16.45 also apply to people, whether clergy or lay, who are engaged in ministry on a voluntary basis. Implementation of these recommendations to this category is not feasible at this time. As a first step in implementing these recommendations the Safe Ministry Commission is proposing that the policies for professional development, professional supervision and ministry review be limited to stipendiary and paid ministers.

Implementing professional supervision may be constrained by the current numbers of trained professional supervisors available to dioceses. Where in a diocese there is an insufficiency of trained professional supervisors, the policy for professional supervision allows for supervision of ministers by appropriately qualified persons who are not professional supervisors for a period of up to five years.

While recommendations 16.5 and 16.44 refer to 'performance appraisals', in the context of the Anglican Church of Australia these recommendations should be understood as referring to 'ministry reviews'.

Best practice for ministry wellbeing and development incorporates a commitment to professional development, professional supervision, and ministry reviews. This policy and its guidelines provide a framework for these three elements. They constitute an approach to life-long learning in ministry and give effect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission. The Safe Ministry Commission acknowledges implementation of the policies for professional development, professional supervision and ministry reviews will involve a significant change of culture for ministry in our church. It will be important to review the effectiveness of the policies, guidelines, and resources in this document after a period of five years.

The Safe Ministry Commission is grateful to The Reverend Tracy Lauersen and Ms Nicola Lock, who both serve on the Commission and who contributed their expertise from backgrounds in organisational development and training, professional supervision and counselling. The Commission also acknowledges the contribution of The Reverend Dr Geoff Broughton who consulted with us on aspects of professional supervision, to the focus groups and dioceses who reviewed the policy and guidelines, and to the Diocese of Bunbury, led by The Right Reverend Dr Ian Coutts, which piloted this policy and guidelines prior to their release.

The Ministry Wellbeing and Development: Policy, Guidelines and Resources has been endorsed by the Standing Committee of the General Synod. The Mission and Ministry Commission has the ongoing responsibility for questions relating to the policy and guidelines and will undertake a review after three years in consultation with dioceses. (SC2021/4/25).

Key terms

bishop means the bishop of the diocese or the bishop to the Defence Force.

bishop's delegate means the person appointed by the bishop to perform the role of the bishop in relation to professional development and ministry reviews. The bishop's delegate may be an assistant bishop, archdeacon, or area dean, or a person with human resources or other relevant experience in a parish or organisation.

clergy means bishops, priests, and deacons.

employer means the person or body which appointed or employed a lay minister.

employer's delegate means the person appointed by the employer to perform the role of the employer in relation to professional development and ministry reviews. The employer's delegate may be a person with human resources or other relevant experience in a parish or organisation.

ministers means:

- a. licensed and stipendiary or paid clergy; and
- b. stipendiary or paid lay church workers providing pastoral care or service, including:
 - children's and families' workers;
 - pastoral care workers;
 - youth ministers and generations ministers;
 - music ministers; and
 - chaplains in hospitals, aged care facilities, and prisons.

These clergy and lay church workers are referred to as 'ministers' throughout the document. A minister does not include a person exclusively involved in administration.

Ministry reviews are guided reflections and discussions that focus on a minister's ministry over a preceding period of time.

Professional development which is sometimes called ministry development, means the maintenance and enhancement of the knowledge, expertise, and competence of ministers throughout their vocation, according to a plan which has been developed with regard to the needs of the minister, the church and society.

Professional supervision means intentional, contracted or covenanted, regular conversation between a professional supervisor and a minister to focus on their ministry and any issues arising from that ministry. It has a strong emphasis on the wellbeing of the minister and the way that ministry is conducted faithfully, ethically, and compassionately. In this document professional supervision includes professional/pastoral supervision as referred to in Recommendation 16.5 of the Royal Commission.

Professional supervisor means professional supervisor or pastoral supervisor as referred to in Recommendation 16.45 of the Royal Commission and as defined in 4.30 of this document.

Royal Commission means the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse.

stipendiary refers to office holders who are paid a stipend to do their ministry.

MINISTRY WELLBEING
AND DEVELOPMENT

1 Introduction

Building a framework for the wellbeing of ministers

- 1.1 Ministry wellbeing and development play a critical role in the health and effectiveness of ministers. Ministry is a demanding role, requiring multiple skills and competencies. Maintaining balance and boundaries and developing supports are important for effective ministry. This is particularly so for those ministers who are the sole stipendiary workers in their parish or chaplaincy.
- 1.2 The daily working life of ministers involves diverse activities—from sermon and teaching preparation to administration, strategic leadership, counselling and mission work. For others, ministry may involve hiring, coaching and managing staff or developing entrepreneurial methods of ministry and mission. Multidisciplinary competencies are needed. These can combine to contribute to frequent long days and many responsibilities. When we add the fast pace of change of the modern world, the post-Christian context in which ministry is undertaken and the increasing demands of compliance, a focus on wellbeing and development is critical for ministerial effectiveness, adaptation, change-leadership and flourishing.
- 1.3 This policy and its guidelines outline three practices which are important elements in ensuring the wellbeing and development of ministers: professional development, professional supervision and ministry reviews. Together, these three elements constitute a framework for life-long learning in ministry, whereby a minister’s knowledge, skills and abilities are continually updated and refreshed so that they are equipped to respond well and to flourish in the work that they do¹.

Reasons for these forms of ministry wellbeing and development

- 1.4 There are a number of reasons why dioceses should adopt the policies and follow the guidelines for ministry wellbeing and development in this document.
 - a. The calling of ministers. Ministers are called to build up the church and to extend God’s Kingdom (Ephesians 3:10; 4:7-16). The reflective practices of review and supervision and the development of skills in ministry build the capacity of ministers to respond to this high calling. They form part of their training and discipline as ministers pursue ‘the crown that will last forever’ (1 Corinthians 9:24-27).

¹ DS Queeney & JK English, Mandatory Continuing Education: A Status Report, Eric clearinghouse on Adult, Career and Vocational Education, Center on Education and Training for Employment, The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, 1994, p.26.

- b. The nature of Christian discipleship. Christian discipleship is shaped by the values of ongoing apprenticeship to Christ, and to ongoing growth in knowledge, service, relationships and wisdom. Discipleship is a dynamic process. The Bible gives significant modelling of this dynamic process. In Jesus' ministry to the disciples as recorded in the New Testament, there is a model of dynamic apprenticeship and ongoing development. In the Apostle Paul's church planting teams, there are models of partnership, teamwork and accountability. In the Old Testament characters of Jethro and Moses, there is a biblical model of personal supervision.

Scripture exhorts disciples to run, walk, grow and train to be fruitful, to do their best, increasing in knowledge and love (2 Peter 3:18; Colossians 1:10; Ephesians 4:15; 1 Timothy 4:7-8; 1 Corinthians 9:24-25; 2 Timothy 2:15; Hebrews 12:1). They are to work heartily for the Lord, to keep the faith, to train for godliness, to press on, to be transformed and to allow others to sharpen their thinking and practices just as they also sharpen the thinking and practices of their colleagues as well (Colossians 3:23; 2 Timothy 4:7; 1 Timothy 4:7-8; Philippians 3:13-14; Romans 12:2; Proverbs 27:17). They are called to use well and to maximise the talents that God has given them for the tasks he has given them to do (Matthew 25:14-30).

- c. Effectiveness. The experience and study of a variety of professions and industries provide evidence that these practices aid both the practitioner, their industry and the public. For example, studies of the impact of professional development on teachers in 2017 found 'significant positive effects on teaching quality' which could be tied to professional development². Corresponding effects have been studied in nurse professional development, and the continuing professional development of doctors and lawyers. The practices outlined in this policy will aid the wellbeing of ministers, the maintenance of standards and the adaptation of ministry to an everchanging world. When viewed through a biblical lens, the church and its ministers have much to learn from these effective business practices which, with their emphasis on service, purpose and accountability, complement values embedded in an understanding of faithful ministry.

- d. Royal Commission recommendations and societal expectations. Mandatory practices of professional development, professional supervision and ministry reviews were recognised by the Royal Commission as important contributors to averting the systemic problems that can lead to widespread abuse. Christians are exhorted in Scripture to respect and submit to the governing authorities, even secular ones, who, the Bible says, are also servants of God and are put in place by God for our good (Romans 13: 1-7).
- 1.5 This policy and guidelines are issued to assist dioceses to respond to the need to develop, supervise and review their ministers. It will aid consistency of application and ease of implementation across all dioceses. Some dioceses have already developed their own models for development, review and supervision. Dioceses that have developed models need simply to ensure that their models meet the minimum standards laid out in this document. In this way, ministers can meet their calling, and respond to Scripture and to the recommendations of the Royal Commission. Included in the guidelines are scenarios to provide practical examples of their implementation.

Support for implementation

- 1.6 To assist with implementation of the policy and guidelines there are a series of templates found under 'resources' in each section. Dioceses may convert these templates into web-based or fillable forms.
- 1.7 To seek further information about these policies or to request further advice about how to implement them, please contact the Mission and Ministry Commission through the General Synod Office:

MINISTRY WELLBEING
AND DEVELOPMENT

2 Application

Policy

- 2.1 This policy applies to ministers as defined in the Key Terms. A diocese may exempt a minister who receives professional supervision, professional development and/or ministry review as part of their employment or appointment by an external body.

Guidelines

- 2.2 Whilst this policy is for 'ministers' as defined in the Key Terms, it can be proportionally adapted for those in part-time stipendiary or paid ministry, including locum ministry, and advice is given about how to do this in the detailed sections that follow. Implementation guidelines are also given for how to adapt these policies and guidelines for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ministers and ministers of culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds. Modifications to these implementation guidelines may also be made by the Bishop to the Defence Forces for full-time Defence Force Chaplains and for Defence Force Chaplains who are not otherwise covered by these guidelines. As far as practicable, modifications by the Bishop to the Defence Forces should be consistent with these guidelines.
- 2.3 While this policy of professional development, professional supervision and ministry reviews does not apply to honorary/volunteer ministers, dioceses are encouraged to consider the benefits of applying this framework to them.
- 2.4 Where dioceses have already introduced professional supervision, professional development, or ministry review measures for ministers, they should be adjusted if needed to meet this policy and guidelines as a minimum. Dioceses may introduce or keep more extensive policies and guidelines as they see fit.

MINISTRY WELLBEING
AND DEVELOPMENT

3 Professional development

Professional Development Policy

- 3.1 Ministers are to undertake a minimum of 30 hours of professional development over three years. At least three hours of professional development must relate to professional responsibilities and boundaries, a further three hours to ethics in ministry, a further three hours to child safety and a further three hours to domestic and family violence.
- 3.2 Professional development content involving face-to-face, online or distance learning must be conducted by suitably qualified persons. It must relate to the minister's practice of ministry and extend their knowledge and skills in areas relevant to their ministry practice needs.
- 3.3 Professional development activities may consist of seminars, workshops, lectures, conferences, discussion groups, multimedia or web-based programs, one-to-one training or other suitable educational activities. Private study or reading is also an acceptable professional development activity but should not comprise more than nine hours of the required professional development activities. The publication of an article related to their ministry practice by a minister also qualifies as a professional development activity, along with membership of a committee, taskforce, working group, or practice section of a professional association, related to ministry. Publications and memberships together should not comprise more than nine hours of the professional development activities over three years. Academic studies related to ministry practice also qualify as professional development activities.
- 3.4 Ministers must keep a record and evidence of their professional development activities and supply these annually as part of their three-year ministry review cycle.
- 3.5 Provided that ministers complete three hours over a three-year cycle professional development related to each of professional responsibilities and boundaries, ethics in ministry, child safety, and domestic and family violence, dioceses have discretion to allow reduced hours of professional development in the case of part-time ministers, or a minister experiencing extended illness, on leave, with reduced working hours, or when they are licensed but not engaged in ministry, or in other special circumstances such as hardship. Any such reduction must be approved in writing.
- 3.6 Where a minister commences a new ministry role, professional development undertaken in the former role is counted as part of the professional development during that three-year cycle.

- 3.7 Where a diocese is satisfied that a minister has not, without reasonable excuse, complied with these requirements, it should take appropriate action to ensure compliance.

Professional Development Guidelines

Appropriate support for ministry

- 3.8 Professional development, which is sometimes called ‘ministry development’, involves ‘The maintenance and enhancement of the knowledge, expertise and competence of ministers throughout their vocation, according to a plan which has been developed with regard to the needs of the minister, the church and society’³.
- 3.9 For some, ‘professional’ may not be the term of choice for clergy and lay ministers, but it is a commonly used term to refer to the competent and skilful practices of one who holds a licence, qualification or recognition for a particular profession or occupation. ‘Professional development’ is the broadly accepted phrase for the development of workers in many fields and industries. It is the term which was applied to ministers in the recommendations of the Royal Commission. Using this phrase builds a common understanding and points to a body of accepted wisdom on the ongoing development of workers in many fields of employment and ministry. For these reasons, it is the phrase which has been adopted in this policy.
- 3.10 Professional development is different to other training because of its relevance to the requirements of the particular context of the minister. When a children’s minister learns about how different ages and stages affect a child’s ability to learn and process information—that is professional development. They are learning what they need to know in order to be a competent children’s minister. When a minister with responsibility for a parish or an organisation learns about the latest changes to compliance laws for child safety—that is professional development. They are learning what they need to know to be a competent parish leader. When a pastoral care worker learns listening skills—that is professional development. They are learning what they need to know to be a competent pastoral carer.

³ T. Lauersen, Recommendations to ‘Suited by their Learning’, Implementations Committee, Diocese of Melbourne, 2014. Adapted from J. Watkins, ‘UK professional associations and continuing professional development: a new direction?’, International Journal of Lifelong Education, Vol.18 (1), p. 64.

- 3.11 Historically, ministry (along with many other fields of service and work) had a ‘front-ended’ approach for gaining necessary skills and competencies. Clergy would do their training in a theological college and on graduating, would then be considered to be equipped with all that was needed for effective ministry. They were expected to use their foundational theological degree and to simply ‘apply’ it for the practice of their ministry for the term of their vocation. Our contemporary understanding of ministry shows that front-ending is not sufficient. Many ministers could easily create a long list titled ‘All the things they didn’t teach me at theological college’. Many practical aspects of ministry are not part of undergraduate theological degrees, many aspects can only be learnt ‘on the job’ in the parish or chaplaincy or diocese, or in an ‘action learning’ environment⁴. Changes to legislative and compliance requirements, along with fast-paced changes in society necessitate an ongoing approach to learning about ministry and mission. Adults often learn best at the time when they have a clear need for learning that has relevance for their current situation. This suggests a minister’s most teachable moments will be experienced as they progress in their vocations. Finally, whilst truth is eternal, knowledge is not static—it evolves as ministers think, seek and ask questions. Ongoing, life-long learning and development are best practice tools for flourishing ministry.
- 3.12 The best professional development is the development that is best suited for the individual and their context. In partnership with the bishop or bishop’s delegate in the case of clergy, and their employer or employer’s delegate in the case of lay ministers. and flowing from their annual ministry review, ministers can set goals for learning for the coming year/s which will direct their professional development in a focused way. Templates for these processes (PD 01 and PD 02) can be found at the end of this section.

Triannual compulsory components

- 3.13 In accordance with the Royal Commission’s recommendations, dioceses should arrange training of their ministers in all four compulsory components of professional development: a minimum of three hours over three years for each compulsory component.
- 3.14 Component 1: Professional responsibilities and boundaries. These include the legal and church frameworks that protect ministers and those they serve in ministry. This includes protection from physical and psychological harm and ensures safe working environments for ministry. Over the course of a three-year cycle, professional responsibilities and boundaries should include:

- personal boundaries (uses of personal information, privacy, discussing personal issues, taking work home, accessibility of the minister);
- professional boundaries (workplace behaviours, respectful communication, inclusivity, safety (some resources available at <https://www.safeworkaustralia.gov.au>), confidentiality, receiving and giving gifts, inappropriate personal, emotional, physical and sexual contact, verbal and physical aggression);
- relevant standards and guidelines, including those in Faithfulness in Service.

3.15 Component 2: Ethics in ministry. Over the course of a three-year cycle areas of ministry, ethics should include:

- ministry practices;
- pastoral relationships;
- power and influence;
- the minister's personal and public life; and
- other relevant standards and guidelines, including those in Faithfulness in Service.

3.16 Component 3: Child safety. Over the course of a three-year cycle child safety training should include:

- training in the National Principles for Child Safe Organisations which were endorsed by members of the Council of Australian Governments, the Prime Minister and state and territory Ministers, in February 2019. Free e-learning is available from <http://childdsafe.elearning.humanrights.gov.au> on how to implement these national principles;
- awareness of State or Territory legislation and compliance requirements;
- training in how to implement the National Principles in a particular ministry context;
- training in any changes to best practice or requirements for child safety;
- mandatory reporting training;
- any other required child-safety training; and
- relevant standards and guidelines, including those in Faithfulness in Service.

3.17 Component 4: Domestic and Family Violence. Over the course of a three-year cycle domestic and family violence training should include:

- increasing ministers' understanding of the patterns and dynamics of abusive relationships;
- providing information on domestic and family violence resources and services; and
- developing ministers' abilities to be proactive in addressing intimate partner violence.

The need for a 'mixed methods' approach

3.18 People learn in different ways. Furthermore, different knowledge and skills are usually best learnt in ways that suit their particular characteristics—some by reading and reflection, some by practice, some by group work, some online, etc. A mixed methods approach to professional development encourages ministers and dioceses to utilise a variety of professional learning contexts. These activities must connect to research, knowledge or practices relevant to a minister's role, and may include:

- attendance at seminars, workshops and conferences;
- participation in discussion groups;
- participation in web-based or other digital programs;
- professional reading, listening, or viewing;
- researching and writing a book or an article for publication in a ministry journal;
- teaching other ministers—in an academic institution, in a conference or course;
- one-to-one training;
- undertaking further academic studies in a relevant discipline; and
- working on a committee, taskforce, working group or practice section of a diocese or ministry related organisation.

Dioceses may add to this list as appropriate. A suggested approach to creating a Professional Development Plan is found in a 'How-to Guide' under Resources for this section.

3.19 A breadth of subject matter and learning methods is important to ensure genuine development is undertaken and so the following guidelines mix the annual allowable proportions of different types of professional development:

- Compulsory subjects (12 hours);
- Professional reading, listening, viewing (up to 9 hours);
- Committee or taskforce work (up to 9 hours);
- Conferences, seminars, workshops;
- Web-based or other digital programs;
- Further academic study;
- Other professional development.

Bishop Jenny needs to complete 30 hours of professional development in each three-year cycle. In the first year of the review cycle, Jenny attended the two-day seminar arranged for clergy of the diocese to focus on the compulsory components. That meant Jenny had 18 hours of professional development left to do. As a member of the Episcopal Standards Commission, Jenny was able to count 9 hours of her work for the Commission that year towards the requirement. For the final 9 hours, Jenny listed attendance at seminars arranged in association with the research work she was doing towards a Doctorate in Ministry.

Delivery through in-house and external providers

- 3.20 Dioceses will need to help ministers to access appropriate professional development. Some knowledge and skills will be best delivered in-house by dioceses rather than by external providers. This may include updates for ministers on changes to legislation affecting ministry or training in the diocese's latest practices regarding child safety in its parishes and organisations. Some knowledge and skills—for example, training in intercultural awareness and diversity—are best delivered by external providers.
- 3.21 There are diverse opportunities for learning and many innovative and recognised subject experts available in external contexts and ministers should be encouraged to pursue those in order that they can benefit most from advances in ministry skills and knowledge. In addition to any mandated diocesan programs, ministers are encouraged to access external opportunities.
- 3.22 The Anglican Church of Australia is a diverse, multi-cultural church. Culturally and linguistically diverse ministers may be prevented from accessing professional development opportunities available to other Australians because - they are not aware of what professional development is available; and/or

- professional development does not consider needs of ministers who use English as a second language or of those who cannot easily access digital services

Dioceses should consider how to make professional development opportunities more accessible to their culturally and linguistically diverse (CALD) ministers and support professional development provision which is suitable for CALD ministers.

Reverend Sanbaylat ministers in a parish in a remote area with poor internet. Although most ministers in the Diocese do some of their compulsory training online, the Diocese arranges for Reverend Sanbaylat to come into the city to join a group of peers in a daytime workshop so that more time for questions and individual attention can be given.

Accessibility and affordability

- 3.23 Some ministers may worry that these professional development requirements will be expensive, but professional development does not need to have high fees attached to it to be worthwhile. It is a good idea for dioceses to establish a matrix of recognised methods and recommended activities and to ensure that any professional development which is recommended is both accessible and affordable.
- 3.24 Ideally, diocesan development sessions should not attract fees. If sessions attracted fees, it would limit the type of professional development programs that could be accessed by ministers and the minister's capacity to fund relevant professional development for their particular ministry context.
- 3.25 Dioceses may consider sharing any professional development programs they develop with other dioceses. Parishes should consider allocating a specific amount or percentage of the minimum stipend in their annual budgets to assist ministers in undertaking professional development. The expense of professional development activities may be tax deductible.
- 3.26 Diocesan grants and flexible work provisions which can be directed towards assisting professional development would be beneficial particularly for underrepresented groups in ministry including women, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people and people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds.

Reverend Sarah Smith is a minister who wants to pursue a PhD in an area of great interest to her Diocese. Recognising that juggling ministry, parenting duties and study can be difficult, her Diocese helps by providing additional study leave for her.

Professional Development Resources

3.27 The following templates are provided to assist with implementation of this policy and guidelines:

- Professional Development Plan (PD 01);
- Record of professional development (PD 02).
Any certificates, records of attendance, reflection on professional reading /listening /viewing should be attached to the annual record.

3.28 The following guides are provided to assist with implementation of this policy and guidelines:

- Creating a Professional Development Plan;
- Developing a written reflection on what you read, view or listen to as part of your professional development.

Professional Development Plan

PD 01

Instructions

1. All ministers should complete an annual Professional Development Plan in accordance with the following specification.
2. Clergy should discuss a draft of this plan with their bishop or the bishop's delegate; lay ministers should discuss a draft with their employer or the employer's delegate.
3. Following any agreed amendment, clergy should send the final plan to their bishop or the bishop's delegate, and lay ministers should send the plan to their employer or the employer's delegate.

How-to Guide

Creating a Professional Development Plan

- For this task you should ideally have a list of capabilities (core and other competencies, skills, knowledge and behaviours) provided by your diocese, church or employer.
- Use your own notepaper or computer to prepare for this task. Note: A SMART activity is one that is Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Realistic, and Timed.

STEP 1	STEP 2	STEP 3
Analyse your current ministry role. Which capabilities (competencies, skills, knowledge and behaviours) are critical to success in this role? List them in order of importance.	Development Identify the areas where your capabilities need to grow to match what is needed. You could use your own personal reflection along with information from your own past role reviews or other feedback you have received. The mandatory development areas are pre-listed. List up to 3 other areas where you need to develop further. Enhancement Now identify capabilities which are your areas of strength from the list under Step 1. Are there strengths that you would like to enhance even further? List one or two.	In a table like the one below, identify ways you can develop and/ or find suitable training in the areas listed in Step 2. Refer to the list of professional development methods in the guidelines for ideas.

Critical capabilities listed in order of importance	Development—Mandatory	Capability to be developed or enhanced	SMART Activity	Outcome/ Measure

How-to Guide

Developing a written reflection on what you read, view and listen to as part of your professional development

Introduction

Most of us would be familiar with the axiom 'we learn by experience'. We also learn faster when we learn through our experiences, by reflecting on what we experience. Reflection and feedback enable us to maximise the learning power of an experience. This is also relevant when we read a book or journal article, listen to a podcast or lecture or view a web-based video. The practice of reflection embeds our learning and adds value to our reading, listening and viewing and makes it more memorable and therefore its value more accessible to us when we can use it in our own practice of ministry.

Written reflection

If you read, listen to or view a resource as part of your professional development, you can use the following prompts to guide your reflection.

Note the details of the resource you used. Then write down your reflection (minimum 500 words). Your written reflection serves as evidence of this professional development activity for the person receiving your Professional Development Plan and your ministry reviewer.

Guide for reflection

- Summarise the content of the book/ article/ podcast/ video.
- What did you learn?
- How, and in what areas does this apply to your practice of ministry?
- How does what you have read, heard or watched connect with Scripture and practical theology?
- What will you do in your ministry practice as a result of what you have read/ watched/ heard? (Think of an activity that is SMART: Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Realistic, Time specific).
- How can you share your learning with other ministry practitioners?
- If desirable, how can you further develop your learning of this topic?

MINISTRY WELLBEING
AND DEVELOPMENT

4 Professional supervision

Professional Supervision Policy

- 4.1 Ministers must complete a minimum of six hours of individual professional supervision or twelve hours of group professional supervision each calendar year.
- 4.2 Professional supervision must be facilitated by a professional supervisor as defined in 4.30 and 4.31 in the professional supervision guidelines. Dioceses may provide a list of professional supervisors for their ministers.
- 4.3 Professional supervision may be accessed by a range of means:
 - face-to-face;
 - online;
 - via telephone; and
 - via video/web conferencing.
- 4.4 Dioceses have discretion to allow reduced hours of professional supervision in the case of a minister experiencing extended illness, on leave, with reduced working hours, or finishing their ministry role during a calendar year, or when they are licensed but not engaged in ministry or in other special circumstances or due to hardship. Any such variation must be approved in writing.
- 4.5 Where a minister commences a new ministry role during the calendar year, professional supervision undertaken in the former role is counted as part of the professional supervision during that year.
- 4.6 Records and evidence of professional supervision should be kept and supplied at annual ministry reviews.
- 4.7 Where a diocese is satisfied that a minister has not, without reasonable excuse, complied with these requirements, it should take appropriate action to ensure compliance.
- 4.8 Where there are insufficient numbers of professional supervisors for all ministers in a diocese to access professional supervision, a diocese may determine that supervision by a person recognised in 4.31 in the professional supervision guidelines may be provided as an alternative to professional supervision for a period of up to 5 years where such a person can obtain insurance for this activity.

Professional Supervision Guidelines

Supervision—effective systemic support

- 4.9 Despite the various existing contexts for peer support, mentoring and coaching systems, there are continuing requests for professional support of which professional supervision is a foundational element.
- 4.10 Professional supervision provides the opportunity for a fully rounded understanding of oneself in relation to one's ministry and the ongoing needs for development in identified specific areas. Also, there are ongoing issues with burnout in ministry: NCLS 2016 data indicates that nearly 50% of clergy experience moderate to high levels of stress⁵. While this measure is counterbalanced by experiencing high levels of personal effectiveness, results from the same survey comparing clergy emotional exhaustion with personal satisfaction indicate that there is a significant proportion of ministers in danger of burnout. Moreover, with its emphasis on normative practice, professional supervision provides a supportive space to explore the implications of Faithfulness in Service on ministry.
- 4.11 The helpfulness of professional supervision was examined in a qualitative survey amongst clergy in the Diocese of Sydney, both male and female, who were currently accessing some form of professional supervision⁶. Four major themes emerged as to the usefulness of receiving professional supervision. Supervision is useful:
- for accountability and challenge;
 - for receiving practical advice and support;
 - to assist with examining ways in which personal and spiritual issues interfere with their ministry; and
 - to receive overall support and strengthening in their ministry.
- 4.12 Francis and Turton's study with Anglican clergy in the UK showed a measurable effect for the practice of reflective ministry leading to lower levels of burnout and stress⁷. Similar evidence is seen in other overseas studies: Spencer, Winston and Bocarnea⁸ after exploring ministry departure in the United States concluded that vision conflict and compassion fatigue were the most significant factors and that these problems existed most prominently where clergy did not have a support team mechanism.

⁶ Cited in N Lock, 'An Exploration into the Nature of Reservations Concerning Professional Supervision Amongst Sydney Anglican Clergy', Master of Ministry thesis, 2011.

Significant benefits for ministers

- 4.13 As defined by Pohly, 'Professional Supervision is a broad space to talk about whatever is happening in ministry, sensitive to God's voice and the spiritual...which effects transition and transformation, resulting in the minister having enhanced self-awareness, ministering competence, theological understanding and Christian commitment'⁹.
- 4.14 Professional supervision is a regular, planned, safe space where a minister brings an event or issue to the supervision session with an approved supervisor under an overarching guide of a contract or covenant which defines the functions, limits and any reporting aspects of the supervision relationship. The presented issue is then discussed from a personal, theological, other person, and interactional viewpoint with the goal of being a formative, normative and restorative activity which promotes better ministerial practice and provides support for the minister.
- 4.15 Professional supervision necessitates the reflective process on the practice of ministry in the presence of another. A graduate from the St Mark's Graduate Certificate program in Professional Supervision writes:
- Writers on supervision recognise the danger of self-deception and the tendency we have to hide the truth from ourselves. Private reflection isn't enough because we rationalise and defend ourselves against what is painful. We need others to speak into our thoughts. (D. Morgan, personal communication to N. Lock, 21.11.2015).*
- 4.16 Additionally, supervision is a learning space. Pedagogical evidence is unambiguous that the best learning and development in relational interactions occurs not in the classroom or conference setting, but when a person is faced with a situation to be resolved in a real-life setting. It is at these times the minister has the highest level of engagement in their development, and the complexities surrounding the event can also be discussed, enabling further capability development.

⁹ K Pohly, K, Transforming the Rough Places: the Ministry of Supervision, Providence House Publishers, Franklin, Tennessee, 2001.

4.17 The three main functions of professional supervision offer a broad base for examining and exploring a wide range of matters that may arise for someone in ministry.

First, the formative aspect of supervision is an educative process that can include guidance on handling difficult situations, skill development and developing self-awareness, suggesting different perspectives, and encouraging growth and change.

Second, the restorative role of supervision is a supportive one, enacted through active listening, feedback, and encouragement, where the minister is given the opportunity for discharging of difficult feelings and attention to self.

Finally, the normative aspects involve dealing with accountability, ethical, church practice and boundary concerns. From time to time, a supervisor may suggest that the minister may need to pay extra attention to certain aspects of their life or ministry through additional training, coaching, personal counselling, or spiritual direction.

The distinctive nature of professional supervision

4.18 Throughout their ministry, ministers may access one or more of a range of supportive activities, including coaching, mentoring, spiritual direction, and counselling. There is a significant degree of overlap between these activities and professional supervision: all require excellent interpersonal and listening skills, and a relationship that is characterised by the quality of trust, wisdom, and discernment in the relationship.

4.19 However, compared to these other activities that ministers access, professional supervision provides a space that has a particular focus on the practice of ministry as it intersects with the identity and personhood of the individual.

4.20 Regular professional supervision provides an ongoing place for reflection, debriefing, learning and support, which from time to time may highlight the need for a period of one of these other supportive practices. For example, in supervision it may become apparent that the minister needs some coaching around a particular aspect or skill set in ministry; or a personal issue becomes intrusive, and the minister may require some counselling to deal with the personal issue more fully.

4.21 Additionally, unlike coaching and mentoring, professional supervision has a particular interest in accountability concerning ethical standards and provides a forum where the supervisor attends, in a respectful way, to any breaking of personal and ethical boundaries within ministry practice. This attention to careful ethical practice can be seen to be further reflected in the training and approval requirements needed to be able to offer professional supervision.

- 4.22 The attention to ethical practice underpins the focus for professional supervision on the whole system: 'professional supervision is practised [both] for the sake of the supervisee, providing a space in which their wellbeing, growth and development are taken seriously, and for the sake of those among whom the supervisee works'.¹⁰
- 4.23 Another important distinctive for professional supervision is that it is not line management: this confusion can often arise because of the use of the word 'supervision' in management activities. Line management activity which has the purpose of addressing professional practice and development issues in relationship to the minister's performance and accountability may arise in professional supervision, but this is not the main focus.

Establishing a contractual or covenantal framework for supervision

- 4.24 Forming a contract or covenant between the minister and the supervisor is a vital component for forming a safe and trusted relationship between the supervisor and the minister. 'Care and detail over contracts are a form of love towards those we don't know very well. It is a recognition that life is full of unexpected pitfalls, and contracts are a way of holding one another to honesty and honour in the face of temptation and distraction. Contracts can give us security and trust.'¹¹
- 4.25 The process of forming this agreement will begin on the first contact and may be commenced with a letter from the supervisor to the minister. It will usually be completed through discussion and negotiation at the first time of meeting. Usually, a contract or covenant deals with the following elements of the supervision relationship:
- time, place, frequency, and duration;
 - cost;
 - focus of supervision;
 - expectations and needs of the supervisor and the minister;
 - confidentiality and its limits;
 - short- and long-term goals for supervision; and
 - review and updating of the contract or covenant.

4.26 A sample supervision contract or covenant can be found below under Resources for this section (PS 03).

Managing independence, confidentiality and reporting

4.27 Confidentiality of professional supervision is paramount to allow the minister to ‘unwrap the gift of their vulnerability’¹² that is crucial for good supervision. Assurance of confidentiality provides the space where the minister can reveal and face their mistakes and learn from them. Of course, there are limits to confidentiality relating to protection of vulnerable persons, legal requirements and church codes of conduct—these need to be carefully explained to the minister as part of the contracting process.

4.28 The question of confidentiality and reporting is best handled in the contracting session at the beginning of the supervision relationship, clarifying with the minister what the professional supervisor might be required to undertake to fulfil any reporting that the diocese requires. It is recommended that any reporting should be of a minimum level, relating only to confirming the minister’s attendance at professional supervision, and any legal or ethical breach that the minister is unwilling to report themselves. It is important that any line management issues such as performance reporting be excluded from reports required of professional supervisors. Any reports submitted should be sighted by the minister before submission to the diocese, unless legal or ethical considerations require otherwise.

Professional supervisors

4.29 For most dioceses, identifying a pool of people who are suitably trained and accredited as professional supervisors to provide professional supervision for all ministers covered by this policy will require determination and creativity. Currently there is a shortage of people fully trained in professional supervision. Some dioceses have developed registers of professional supervisors and the persons they have approved for inclusion include a range of suitably qualified practitioners. Alternatively, a diocese may refer ministers to a relevant professional supervision body such as the Australasian Association of Supervision (AAOS).

4.30 The criteria below can be used to identify a professional supervisor.

¹² M. Paterson, Between a Rock and Hard Place, Pastoral Supervision Revisited & Revised, Institute of Pastoral Supervision & Reflective Practice, Edinburgh, 2020, Chapter 8: ‘Vulnerability: a Gift to be Unwrapped, not Shunned’

A person suitable to be a professional supervisor will:

have successfully completed:

- Graduate Certificate or Diploma in Professional Supervision from St Mark's National Theological Centre; University of Divinity; Stirling Theological College etc; or
- other formal accredited training in Professional Supervision such as two subjects in Professional Supervision from School of Theology Charles Sturt University, Moore Theological College, Australian College of Theology; or
- an equivalent qualification;

or be recognised as:

- a CPE Acting Level 1 Supervisor or higher; or
- an accredited supervisor with a relevant professional association e.g. AAOS, CCAA, Chaplaincy Australia, Transforming Practices, PACFA, AASW, APS, or equivalent¹³.

A professional supervisor will also:

- hold professional membership with a relevant professional association or be working towards holding membership; and
- hold adequate professional indemnity and public liability insurance covering working as a professional supervisor; and
- be receiving regular continuing professional development in supervision (5 hours per annum recommended); and
- be receiving their own professional supervision for their practice.

In addition, a professional supervisor should:

- have a suitable respect for and understanding of the context and framework in which the minister works; and
- have a degree of independence from the institution within which the person is in ministry.

Interim alternative supervision

4.31 In dioceses where it is not yet possible to find sufficient numbers of persons who meet the criteria in 4.30, an alternative would be to engage those in a diocese who provide a regular, contracted, reflective conversation which is focused on ministry practice through coaching, mentoring or spiritual direction. This alternative provision is available for five years to enable the training of a sufficient number of approved supervisors. A provider of interim alternative supervision should:

- have a degree of independence from the institution within which the person is in ministry; and ¹³ AAOS = Australian Association of Supervision; CCAA= Christian Counselling Association of Australia; PACFA = Psychotherapy and Counselling Federation of Australia; AASW = Australian Association of Social Work; APS = Australian Psychological Society.

- be trained in the particular reflective practice and is accredited with, or a member of, or eligible for accreditation or membership with a relevant professional body or member association (this may include coaching, mentoring, or spiritual direction professional associations); and
- develop a formal agreement or contract which defines at a minimum the duration, frequency, desired goals, confidentiality, and review for the professional supervision, with reasonable adjustments for cultural, linguistic and ability diversity; and
- receive regular continuing professional development (5 hours per annum recommended); and
- receive regular professional supervision for their own practice; and
- hold adequate professional indemnity and public liability insurance covering provision of supervision. A sample application form for a provider of interim alternative supervision can be found below under Resources in this section (PS 02).

Costs of supervision and models for meeting those costs

- 4.32 Some dioceses may consider partnering together to provide professional supervision. Those ministers requiring supervision in one diocese could be linked with a supervisor in the partner diocese, and this partnering could be reciprocated. Professional supervisors in each diocese would need to be qualified and approved; however, this model would ameliorate ongoing professional costs.
- 4.33 For those dioceses wanting instead to access external accredited supervisors, supervisors are generally paid in the range of $100 to $200 per hour, and the usual recommended number of one-hour long supervision sessions per annum is 6 to 10. If using group supervision, it is recommended practice that two 'group hours' counts as the equivalent of one 'individual hour'. An expected cost of attending a two-hour supervision group with 5 to 6 ministers is between $60 and $80 per individual¹⁴.
- 4.34 Currently whilst staff costs account for a large part of most parish budgets, there is limited allocation to maintenance of ministers in terms of paying for professional development and wellbeing expenses.

There are several ways that the cost of providing supervision can be covered:

- parishes pay the full cost of a minister's professional supervision as a staff expense. This may necessitate some diocesan funding for parishes with low incomes;

¹⁴ Estimated costs at October 2020: costs involved with using registered psychologists or business mentors and coaches could be considerably higher.

- the cost is shared equally between the diocese, the parish and the individual —this is a model known to be operating in several dioceses;
- the cost is shared between the parish and the minister;
- the individual's contribution towards the cost of professional supervision may be a tax-deductible expense.

Individual versus group delivery of professional supervision

4.35 Individual supervision is preferred by many for the following reasons:

- the attention is all focused on the minister: the minister does not have to divert energy responding to other members of a group;
- there is more time to discuss individual matters;
- some ministers might not feel comfortable discussing their situations in front of others and in small communities; confidentiality of the matters presented is more easily protected;
- some ministers might struggle with being fully open about their personal reactions in front of others.

4.36 However, there are many benefits of the group supervision format if the experience is well-designed. Group supervision has been shown to develop confidence, enable rich collaborative learning and provides an excellent forum for discussing complex ethical matters¹⁵.

4.37 It is important that the person conducting group supervision is appropriately trained and experienced in group supervision.

Preparation for supervision

4.38 Good professional supervision begins with the minister reflecting on their ministry practice and deciding what they need to take to their supervision session. This process ensures the minister is working with reflecting on their ministry practice even before they attend the supervision session. In this way the minister is responsible for driving the agenda of the professional supervision sessions: the supervisor facilitates the process of each session and may raise items for discussion related to what the minister brings, or any ethical concerns they notice. Ministers are responsible for how they prepare and present in supervision and for identifying what makes it important enough to spend time on and for what they choose not to share. Anything is appropriate that arises from actual experiences and that can affect, or is affecting, the quality of their ministry.

¹⁵ AL Valentino, LA LeBlanc & TP Sellers, 'The Benefits of Group Supervision and a Recommended Structure for Implementation', Behavior Analysis in Practice, 9, 2016, pp. 320-328.

4.39 The following starters may be useful in reflecting on what the minister would like to talk about¹⁶.

- 'the most significant event in my ministry work since my last supervision is...'
- 'this incident/concern keeps pushing itself back into my mind...'
- 'I am aware of very strong feelings about something that has happened...'
- 'when [this] happened, it seemed to be a pattern repeating itself...'
- 'I am so [tired, miserable, elated, inspired, challenged, worried]...'
- 'an event / incident I have noticed I keep telling people about is...'
- 'I want to clarify where I stand on a particular issue...'
- 'I want to stop something like [this] happening again...'
- 'I want to get something like [this] to happen more often...'
- 'I seem to keep avoiding/putting off...'

A minister may wish to focus on their role in a particular situation, their priorities, time management, insights, people, committees, institutions, changes, pressures, or needs.

Evaluating professional supervision

4.40 Evaluation of the supervision offered and received is integral to ensuring that professional supervision sessions are effective and meeting the minister's needs.

4.41 Both informal and formal methods can be used to evaluate professional supervision. Informal evaluation should take place in every supervision session by the supervisor asking the minister what has been helpful in the session that day. More formal evaluation is best done at least annually, where the minister and supervisor can collaborate using creative methods or a formal evaluation form to work out how the supervisor is providing an effective space for supporting the person in their ministry.

4.42 A sample form for Evaluation of Professional Supervision can be found below under Resources for this section (PS 05).

Implementation in remote locations

4.43 The COVID-19 pandemic has required most practitioners to move professional supervision practice into the online space using various platforms including Zoom, FaceTime, WhatsApp etc. This 'human experiment' has led to providers of professional supervision and other reflective practices grappling with both the practicalities, ethics, and effectiveness of delivering supervision online.

¹⁶ Adapted from The Uniting Church in Australia Ministerial Education Commission, Professional Supervision: A process of Reflection on Ministry Experience, 2011

- 4.44 Recent research has demonstrated that ‘in-person supervision and tele-supervision had equivalent outcomes; there was no significant decrease in participant-rated supervision satisfaction or supervisory working alliance’¹⁷. One participant in this study noted that ‘The difference between in-person and tele-supervision really comes down to the person itself [supervisor]. It would be really easy for a not-so-good supervisor to miss things in tele-supervision and just not be super in touch. The supervisor is the most important factor in the end though.’¹⁸
- 4.45 Giving and receiving supervision in the online space requires some attention to issues of which technology to use, and some specific ethical issues: many supervisors have received specific training in offering online supervision which can be confirmed when finding a new supervisor. Given this forced change in the delivery practices of professional supervision, many supervisors now offer online supervision which makes supervision easier to access for remote workers.

Professional supervision with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ministers

- 4.46 Providing professional supervision for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ministers requires the ability to be culturally responsive.
- 4.47 Professional supervision will take place in the ‘intercultural space’ of the two overlapping cultures. Techniques such as the use of stories, experience, and actions to process theologies, practices, and models, rather than using theologies, practices and models to process stories, experience and actions are helpful. Working in the Northern Territory with remote community workers, The Reverend Kate Beer has developed a resource specifically for facilitating the professional supervision space called a ‘Yarning Map’¹⁹.

Professional supervision with culturally and linguistically diverse ministers

- 4.48 When working within intercultural contexts, professional supervisors may be blind to any cultural issues, and fail to respond in an emotionally empathic way. A supervisor may only be culturally aware—that is, operates in a cognitive paradigm where culturally relevant content is raised and processed intellectually—but fails to be culturally sensitive or responsive. Cultural sensitivity and responsiveness require the supervisor to:

- adopt a curious and inquiring attitude,
- be able to acknowledge and name cultural differences in the conversation,
- engage at an emotional level with any cultural influences present, and
- explore matters of cultural power present in both the supervision relationship and in the relationship the minister has with those they minister to.

5 Ministry reviews

Ministry Reviews Policy

- 5.1 To ensure support for ministry wellbeing, for achievement in the ministry to which they have been called, and for accountability, ministers are to participate in three different ministry reviews across a three-year cycle of ministry.
- 5.2 Ministry reviews should include the opportunity:
- to encourage and appreciate current strengths and ministry progress;
 - to affirm the alignment with the mission of the church;
 - to identify areas that need attention or improvement and outline pathways to address such areas;
 - for accountability within the context of the leadership of the parish or organisation; and
 - for identifying areas requiring improvement in their ministry support and the means to achieve those improvements.
- 5.3 Ministry reviews should include the following features:
- collection of information from the minister in review through reports/questionnaires/interviews and/or from selected recipients of the person's ministry; and
 - consideration by the reviewer and/or the minister in review of such ministry areas as skills, strengths, deficiencies, goals and spiritual, personal and training needs.
- 5.4 Over a three-year cycle, which will commence at the beginning of the calendar year following the first date of service in the ministry role, reviews will increase in breadth:
- a. In the first year, a self-review will be undertaken based on learning from professional supervision and professional development and a guided self-reflection on the minister's ministry.
 - b. In the second year, a joint review will be conducted between the minister and, in the case of clergy, their licencing bishop or the bishop's delegate and, in the case of lay ministers, their employer or the employer's delegate. The minister can choose to include the learnings from their professional development and professional supervision.
 - c. In the third year a facilitated review will take place in a manner determined by the diocese. This third-year review will include reference to the minister's role description and address the vision and values of their parish/ministry area (or diocese in the case of a bishop). This facilitated review should include a self-evaluation component and multi-sourced feedback from different perspectives. Possible perspectives may be sought from peers, leaders in the parish, ministry leaders and diocesan leaders. The minister can choose to include the learnings from their professional development and professional supervision. A draft of any review report should be given to and discussed with the minister prior to finalisation, with an opportunity to request amendment prior to its finalisation.

- 5.5 Dioceses have discretion to vary requirements for ministry reviews in the case of part-time ministers, or a minister experiencing extended illness, on leave, with reduced working hours, or finishing their ministry role during a calendar year, or when they are licensed but not engaged in ministry or in other special circumstances or due to hardship. Any such variation must be approved in writing.
- 5.6 At the conclusion of the ministry review in years one and two, a brief report of goals and development needs should be supplied by the minister to their bishop or their bishop's delegate in the case of clergy, and their employer or their employer's delegate in the case of lay ministers. The review should otherwise remain confidential. In the third-year review, after any agreed amendments are made by the minister and reviewer, a detailed written record of the review should be supplied by the reviewer to both the minister and their bishop or their bishop's delegate in the case of clergy, and their employer or their employer's delegate in the case of lay ministers.
- 5.7 Where a diocese is satisfied that a minister has not, without reasonable excuse, complied with these requirements, it should take appropriate action to ensure compliance.

Ministry Reviews Guidelines

Ministry Reviews—a time for reflection, feedback and recognition

- 5.8 Ministry reviews are guided reflections and discussions that focus on a minister's ministry over a preceding period of time.
- 5.9 A ministry review is an opportunity to reflect on their ministry, an opportunity for feedback and encouragement, to recognise a person's success and to give constructive feedback on how they undertake their ministry.
- 5.10 Role reviews have been used and misused. Reviews take time and preparation and to be useful, they need to be more than 'box-ticking' exercises, and they need to go deeper than analysing simply what a minister has 'done' in the preceding period. The ministry review will include the opportunity to accomplish the items listed under 5.2 and will involve an analysis of the items listed under 5.3. Each reviewer will approach a review with their own set of unconscious biases. These may include gender stereotyping, ageism, racism, cultural assumptions and ableism. It is important that a reviewer reflect and recognise their own particular biases before undertaking a review.

Reviews are continuous on a three-year cycle

- 5.11 Year 1: Self-review. Ministers should set aside a minimum of two hours for a self-guided review of their ministry. It would be beneficial if this self-review could take place in partnership with a spiritual retreat. A minister may seek assistance in conducting a self-review.
- 5.12 A template offering a suggested process for the self-review is provided under Resources at the end of this section (MR 01). The review should enable ministers to then complete a Professional Development Plan (PD 01). Clergy should send a copy of their completed PD 01 form to their bishop or their bishop’s delegate. Lay ministers should send a copy of their completed PD 01 form to their employer or their employer’s delegate.

Reverend James Cheung is in the first year of ministry as assistant in a suburban parish. In this Diocese, the Bishop delegates management of the first-year review to a minister’s direct supervisor. For his first self-review James drops his kids at school and then heads off to a retreat centre often used by clergy in his Diocese and uses the day to pray, walk, and to reflect on his ministry. He uses the MR 01 template to guide his reflection and to identify some goals for his professional development for the year ahead. The next day when back at the office he fills out his Professional Development Plan (PD 01) and shares it with his direct supervisor – the Priest of his parish.

- 5.13 Year 2: Joint review. In Year 2, clergy should meet with their bishop or the bishop’s delegate and lay ministers with their employer or their employer’s delegate for an informal review.

- 5.14 Ministers and reviewers should set aside one hour for this review or meet once a month for 15 minutes²⁰ and have a conversation about specific topics related to their ministry, noting any actions arising from these conversation/s. Monthly 15-minute conversations have the advantage of building of a continuing dialogue and better engagement between the two people involved in the review.
- 5.15 The recommended six topics for this review are as follows:
- ministry role dashboard—gauging the minister’s views on ministry satisfaction, morale and communication;
 - strengths and talents—identifying the ministers' strengths and talents and giving thought to future roles that may be suitable for the minister;
 - ministry goals—determining what goals and objectives the minister has for their ministry role in the coming year. This may be done with reference to any relevant role description as well as strategic plan, mission and vision documents;
 - opportunities for personal growth—focusing on how to improve performance to match expected outcomes;
 - professional development—identifying courses or other methods such as coaching or mentoring that will build the minister’s strengths and improve ministry outcomes; and
 - continuous improvement—taking a ‘whole of ministry life’ perspective, exploring how the minister could improve the effectiveness of their ministry.
- 5.16 A template for the review, including question prompts for each topic, is provided under Resources in this section (MR 02). The agreed action plan in the review will help identify relevant professional development needs and informs the Professional Development Plan. A copy of the Professional Development Plan (PD 01) should be retained by their bishop or their bishop’s delegate in the case of clergy, or their employer or their employer’s delegate in the case of lay ministers.

Reverend Mike Chapman is Rector of a parish in a large Diocese. In this Diocese, the Bishop delegates second year reviews to the local area dean. Mike meets with his area dean for a coffee each month (sometimes over ‘zoom’), during which they tackle one of the six topics for review listed in 5.15 above and make some action plans out of those conversations. They each make a few notes following the meeting. At the end of the year, Mike transfers some of the learning goals they’ve discussed over the year onto Form PD 01 and sends a copy to his Bishop.

²⁰ T Baker, The End of the Performance Review: A New Approach to Appraising Employee Performance, Palgrave Macmillan, Basingstoke, Hampshire, 2013. The Five 15-minute conversations model was developed by Dr Baker.

5.17 Year 3: Facilitated review. The third-year review will include reference to the minister's role description and address the vision and values of their parish or organisation (or diocese in the case of a bishop). This facilitated review should include a self-evaluation component and feedback from sufficient individuals to provide a multi-sourced perspective.

5.18 Dioceses may manage the Year 3 review in one of two ways:

a. using an external provider

Dioceses may consider using an external provider to facilitate these formal reviews. Examples of providers include:

- LeadingConneXions. LeadingConneXions have developed a 360 review for Christian leaders in the Australian context (contact sjones@leadingconnexions.com.au)
- Converge International. Converge International utilise a Multifactor Leadership Questionnaire (MLQ), also known as the MLQ 3600 (contact Chris.Ralph@convergeintl.com.au)
- Centre for Ministry Development (<https://cmd.moore.edu.au/>)

b. managing the review in-house

A more economical, simpler multi-sourced feedback can be managed internally. This could proceed in seven steps as follows.

Step 1. The reviewer asks the minister being reviewed to supply at least six names and email address of people whose feedback they would consider useful. The nominees should represent a variety of people, such as those who:

- the minister reports to;
- the minister supervises;
- the minister serves;
- are colleagues and peers or team members of the minister;
- are from the minister's parish, if the minister is in parish ministry; and
- are from the minister's parish council, if the minister is in parish ministry, or another governance group or committee that the minister reports to.

Step 2. The reviewer writes separately to the people the minister has nominated to provide feedback, asking that they each provide responses to the same set of questions. A template for requesting feedback can be found under Resources for this section.

Step 3. The minister fills in their current responsibilities, the vision and values of their parish and Diocese and their achievements on Form MR 04 and passes these on to their reviewer.

If no role description or mission, vision and strategy documents exist, then this is a good time to initiate their development. The minister may also supply the reviewer with their Professional Development Plan (PD 01) for the year and their record of Professional Development (PD 02) for Years 1, 2 & 3.

Step 4. The reviewer analyses the feedback supplied by others (outlined in Step 1) and summarises them into one to three themes and summarises these on the MR 04 form.

In summarising the responses, the reviewer should:

- identify the top one to three themes that emerge from the feedback;
- remove any unhelpful or hurtful remarks; and
- ensure no names or significant identifying features are attached to any part of the summary.

Step 6. The reviewer meets with the minister for review. The focus should be on celebrating the minister's strengths, identifying any gaps in performance and discussing and agreeing to any action, training or changes that may help in the coming year. During this review meeting, the MR 04 form is finalised jointly with the minister being reviewed given an opportunity to request amendments to the MR 04 form before it is finalised. Copies of the MR 04 form, and the Professional Development Plan (PD 01) are given to the minister and to their bishop, with a copy kept confidentially on the minister's personnel file. In the case of lay ministers, copies should be given to the lay minister and to their employer, with a copy confidentially on the lay minister's personnel file.

Step 7. The minister shares the discussion and any insights and outcomes with their approved supervisor in order to continue to work on any areas of needed improvement in ministry.

Kristine Casta has been the children's minister in her parish for ten years. Her facilitated review is conducted by the Vicar of her parish. Although it's a new process and she feels a bit anxious about being reviewed, the outcome is a resounding affirmation of her ministry and a commitment by her Vicar to recommend an increase in the children's ministry budget. The Vicar keeps a copy of her Professional Development Plan (PD 01) and the review form MR 04 in her personnel file at the church office and gives her a copy for her own records.

Conduct of ministry reviews

5.19 Across a three-year cycle, ministry reviews will involve:

- collection of information from the person in review through a report/questionnaires/ interviews and from selected recipients of the person's ministry; and
- consideration by the reviewer and the person being reviewed of ministry areas, skills required, deficiencies, goals and also spiritual, personal and training needs.

5.20 To facilitate conduct of the reviews, two dioceses may collaborate, with each diocese providing personnel to conduct reviews for the other in an agreed manner. This approach may have practical benefits especially for third-year ministry reviews.

5.21 Dioceses may use technology (such as via telephone, Zoom or FaceTime or Google Meetings) for some reviews. If this is the case, those involved should be aware of the limitations as well as the advantages of this platform for communicating. Advantages of using appropriate technology include the fact that it is cost effective and time effective. Limitations include the lack of non-verbal cues for communication, the possibility of technology dropouts, and participants experiencing technology fatigue.

Ministry reviews in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and CALD Environments

5.22 The Anglican Church of Australia is a diverse, multi-cultural church. Culturally and linguistically diverse ministers may face difficulties in the ministry review process compared to other Australians because

- they may not be aware of expectations which are based on cultural assumptions; and/or
- the review process may not consider needs of ministers who use English as a second language.

5.23 Providing ministry reviews for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ministers requires the ability to be culturally responsive. Ministry reviews may be taking place in the 'inter-cultural space' of the two overlapping cultures. Reviewers should be aware of the risk of power imbalance (whether current or historic) and ensure cultural safety.

5.24 Dioceses should consider how to make ministry review opportunities more suited to their culturally and linguistically diverse (CALD) ministers and to ensure clarity of cultural as well as ministry expectations for CALD ministers.

Aspects of the review process

5.25 Best practice benchmarks for ministry reviews highlight that they should be:

- mission-focused: affirming that the focus of ministry, globally and locally, is advancing God's mission.
- outcome-focused: concentrating on achievements (outcomes) rather than 'busy'ness (lists of activities). For example, rather than counting how many pastoral phone-calls have been made over a period, the review looks for evidence that people feel pastorally attended to.
- role-related: directly linked to goals identified in any current strategic plan for the parish or the organisation. Signs of progress made should be the focus. The review should also look for alignment between the minister's Professional Development Plan and the capabilities in the minister's role description. It is recognised that some roles do not have existing role descriptions. Support can be given to create role descriptions by contacting relevant personnel from the diocese.
- objective: both minister and reviewer should 'speak the truth in love' according to demonstrable facts. Use of the templates provided should create a framework for impartial and comprehensive analysis. To aid objectivity, it is also suggested that the second and third-year reviews be conducted by different people. So, if a person from the parish or organisation of the minister leads the second-year review, a more independent reviewer should conduct the third-year review.
- sensitive: conducted in a supportive, not punitive, environment. Reviews should take into account both systemic and particular stresses upon ministry. They should consider whether the minister has taken on additional or varied responsibilities or taken the opportunity to make adaptations as ministry contexts change. For example, the COVID-19 pandemic has led to fast and dramatic changes in the ministry workplace. Reviews are a time to reflect on changes such as these and to adjust a role, initiate training and provide support for adaptation.
- confidential: strictly following the protocols, such as to whom reports of the Year 2 and Year 3 reviews should be sent. Any breach of confidentiality will undermine the whole process and could be extremely harmful to a range of people.
- balanced: between critique and encouragement.

Ministry Reviews Resources

5.26 The following templates are provided to assist with implementation of this policy and guidelines:

- Self-review of ministry (MR 01);
- Report of joint review of ministry (MR 02);
- Sample script for requesting feedback from prospective respondents (MR 03);
- Report of facilitated review of ministry (MR 04).

Year 1 Ministry Review Self-review of ministry

MR 01

Instructions

1. This self-review is for private self-reflection: you do not need to show it or pass it on to anyone else.
2. Set aside at least 2 hours in a quiet place to do the review.
3. Gather the following resources: Bible, pen and paper or computer; vision/mission/strategy documents for your ministry area; if there is one, your specific role description.
4. Begin with a Bible reading and prayer. Copy the headings on the left below to your paper or computer. Then use the questions and suggestions below as a prompt to reflect on and review your ministry over the last 12 months.
5. Once this review is complete, complete the Professional Development Plan (PD 01). Clergy should send the final plan to their bishop or the bishop's delegate and lay ministers should send the plan to their employer or the employer's delegate.

Enjoyment Reflecting on the last 12 months, what have you enjoyed the most about your ministry? What have been areas of blessing for you/ your parish/ministry area?

Vision and strategy If your ministry has a vision, mission and a set of strategies and plans, review them and reflect on what has been achieved over the last 12 months, and what remains to be accomplished. If you don't have these matters documented, make a plan to develop and document them and, in the meantime, reflect on what has been achieved.

Goals Reflecting on the last 12 months, what ministry goals have you personally achieved and what remains to be accomplished? Make a list of your ministry goals for the coming 12 months.

Training In order to accomplish the ministry goals you've identified above, do you need any upskilling or training? More generally, what skills development do you think you need to undertake for your ministry role in the coming twelve months? Are there other goals you have for your ongoing personal formation as a minister?

Relationships Reflect on the way you relate to the following groups of people/individuals. Which relationships are going well? Do any need improvement or have problems? List some things you can do that may improve any relationships that need it over the coming year.

- People you work with, supervise or report to.
- People on parish council or another governance group you are involved in.
- Broader colleague networks (deanery, chaplaincy groups).
- Parishioners.
- Your family.

- Time management and prioritising Reflect on how you have been dividing up your time between the various parts of your role. Plan ahead to make any needed changes so that the balance for the coming year is appropriate. Consider the following and add to or change the list as appropriate for your role:
- leadership role;
 - teaching, preaching and prayer;
 - mission and evangelism;
 - pastoral care;
 - administration; and
 - governance.
- Wellbeing Looking back over the last 12 months, how well have you looked after your own self-care and ministry/life balance? List some plans for your well-being for the coming 12 months.
- Spiritual wellbeing What personal practices of prayer and Scripture reading have you undertaken in the past 12 months? List your plans for these practices in the coming year.
- Character 'The fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, forbearance, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness and self-control' (Galatians 5:22-23). Which of these are demonstrable in your life now? Identify any of these fruit (which are character traits) that you struggle with. Identify a few simple actions you could take to grow in any traits you have identified.

Year 2 Ministry Review
Report of Joint review of ministry

MR 02

Instructions for the minister

1. Arrange to meet with your reviewer for one hour OR meet with the reviewer once a month for 15 minutes and have a conversation about each of these areas until the review is complete.
2. Gather the following resources: any relevant vision/mission/strategy documents for your ministry area; if there is one, your specific role description.
3. Copy the six headings on the left below to your paper or computer. Then, in conversation with the reviewer, use the questions and suggestions below as prompts to reflect on and review your ministry over the last 12 months.
4. For each topic or theme, develop an action plan.
5. Once this review is complete, complete the Professional Development Plan (PD 01). Clergy should send the final plan to their bishop or the bishop's delegate and lay ministers should send the Plan to their employer or the employer's delegate.

Year 3 Ministry Review

Facilitated review: Sample script for Requesting feedback from prospective respondents

MR 03

Instructions for the Reviewer

1. Use the sample script below to recruit at least six respondents for the multi-sourced feedback process.
2. Write separately to each prospective respondent.
3. Ensure that all responses are kept confidential.

Sample script

Dear [Respondent Name]

As part of a ministry review for [Minister Name], I am writing to ask you to provide some feedback on their ministry.

The review process involves gaining responses to a common set of questions from a diverse group of people related to [Minister Name's] ministry. [Minister Name] has suggested that you would be a good person to ask and has provided me with your contact details.

The questions below are designed so that you can give some honest feedback that will be valuable for [Minister Name's] ongoing ministry. The feedback you provide will be de-identified and compiled with other feedback into general themes. None of your feedback will be directly quoted, but it is possible that [Minister Name] may be able to discern who has contributed some of the feedback.

You can write as much or as little as you wish in response to each of these questions and you can add any further comments that may not be addressed by the questions.

1. What personal qualities do you value the most about [Minister Name's] ministry/leadership?
2. What are three areas that are going well in [Minister Name's] ministry/leadership?
3. What should [Minister Name] do more of, do less of, and do differently?
4. What areas of ministry do you think [Minister Name] should focus on in the coming year?

Please send your responses to these questions to me by [date].

Year 3 Ministry Review
Report of Facilitated review of ministry

MR 04

Instructions for the reviewer

1. In accordance with the relevant guidelines, collect and collate relevant responses from an appropriate range of people to four standardised questions about the ministry of the person in focus.
2. Prepare and present a draft report, in a format of your own devising, to the minister. The minister should be given an opportunity to request amendment prior to the report being finalised. Then discuss and agree to any action, professional development, training or other changes that may help in the coming year.
3. Use this template as a specification for the Report and the Action Plan. In the case of clergy, send the report and the associated action plan to the bishop or the bishop's delegate. In the case of lay ministers, send the report to the minister's employer or the employer's delegate.

MINISTRY WELLBEING AND DEVELOPMENT

Appendix

Policy Statements

These policies apply to ministers as defined in the Key Terms. A diocese may exempt a minister who receives professional supervision, professional development and/or ministry review as part of their employment or appointment by an external body.

3 Professional Development Policy

- 3.1 Ministers are to undertake a minimum of 30 hours of professional development over three years. At least three hours of professional development must relate to professional responsibilities and boundaries, a further three hours to ethics in ministry, a further three hours to child safety and a further three hours to domestic and family violence.
- 3.2 Professional development content involving face-to-face, online or distance learning must be conducted by suitably qualified persons. It must relate to the minister's practice of ministry and extend their knowledge and skills in areas relevant to their ministry practice needs.
- 3.3 Professional development activities may consist of seminars, workshops, lectures, conferences, discussion groups, multimedia or web-based programs, one-to-one training or other suitable educational activities. Private study or reading is also an acceptable professional development activity but should not comprise more than nine hours of the required professional development activities. The publication of an article related to their ministry practice by a minister also qualifies as a professional development activity, along with membership of a committee, taskforce, working group, or practice section of a professional association, related to ministry. Publications and memberships together should not comprise more than nine hours of the professional development activities over three years. Academic studies related to ministry practice also qualify as professional development activities.
- 3.4 Ministers must keep a record and evidence of their professional development activities and supply these annually as part of their three-year ministry review cycle.
- 3.5 Provided that ministers complete three hours over a three-year cycle professional development related to each of professional responsibilities and boundaries, ethics in ministry, child safety, and domestic and family violence, dioceses have discretion to allow reduced hours of professional development in the case of part-time ministers, or a minister experiencing extended illness, on leave, with reduced working hours, or when they are licensed but not engaged in ministry, or in other special circumstances such as hardship. Any such reduction must be approved in writing.
- 3.6 Where a minister commences a new ministry role, professional development undertaken in the former role is counted as part of the professional development during that three-year cycle.

- 3.7 Where a diocese is satisfied that a minister has not, without reasonable excuse, complied with these requirements, it should take appropriate action to ensure compliance.

4 Professional Supervision Policy

- 4.1 Ministers must complete a minimum of six hours of individual professional supervision or twelve hours of group professional supervision each calendar year.
- 4.2 Professional supervision must be facilitated by a professional supervisor as defined in 4.30 and 4.31 in the professional supervision guidelines. Dioceses may provide a list of professional supervisors for their ministers.
- 4.3 Professional supervision may be accessed by a range of means:
- face-to-face;
 - online;
 - via telephone; and
 - via video/web conferencing.
- 4.4 Dioceses have discretion to allow reduced hours of professional supervision in the case of a minister experiencing extended illness, on leave, with reduced working hours, or finishing their ministry role during a calendar year, or when they are licensed but not engaged in ministry or in other special circumstances or due to hardship. Any such variation must be approved in writing.
- 4.5 Where a minister commences a new ministry role during the calendar year, professional supervision undertaken in the former role is counted as part of the professional supervision during that year.
- 4.6 Records and evidence of professional supervision should be kept and supplied at annual ministry reviews.
- 4.7 Where a diocese is satisfied that a minister has not, without reasonable excuse, complied with these requirements, it should take appropriate action to ensure compliance.
- 4.8 Where there are insufficient numbers of professional supervisors for all ministers in a diocese to access professional supervision, a diocese may determine that supervision by a person recognised in 4.31 in the professional supervision guidelines may be provided as an alternative to professional supervision for a period of up to 5 years where such a person can obtain insurance for this activity.

5 Ministry Reviews Policy

- 5.1 To ensure support for ministry wellbeing, for achievement in the ministry to which they have been called, and for accountability, ministers are to participate in three different ministry reviews across a three-year cycle of ministry.
- 5.2 Ministry reviews should include the opportunity:
- to encourage and appreciate current strengths and ministry progress;
 - to affirm the alignment with the mission of the church;
 - to identify areas that need attention or improvement and outline pathways to address such areas;
 - for accountability within the context of the leadership of the parish or organisation; and
 - for identifying areas requiring improvement in their ministry support and the means to achieve those improvements.
- 5.3 Ministry reviews should include the following features:
- collection of information from the minister in review through reports/questionnaires/interviews and/or from selected recipients of the person's ministry; and
 - consideration by the reviewer and/or the minister in review of such ministry areas as skills, strengths, deficiencies, goals and spiritual, personal and training needs.
- 5.4 Over a three-year cycle, which will commence at the beginning of the calendar year following the first date of service in the ministry role, reviews will increase in breadth:
- a. In the first year, a self-review will be undertaken based on learning from professional supervision and professional development and a guided self-reflection on the minister's ministry.
 - b. In the second year, a joint review will be conducted between the minister and, in the case of clergy, their licencing bishop or the bishop's delegate and, in the case of lay ministers, their employer or the employer's delegate. The minister can choose to include the learnings from their professional development and professional supervision.
 - c. In the third year a facilitated review will take place in a manner determined by the diocese. This third-year review will include reference to the minister's role description and address the vision and values of their parish/ministry area (or diocese in the case of a bishop). This facilitated review should include a self-evaluation component and multi-sourced feedback from different perspectives. Possible perspectives may be sought from peers, leaders in the parish, ministry leaders and diocesan leaders. The minister can choose to include the learnings from their professional development and professional supervision. A draft of any review report should be given to and discussed with the minister prior to finalisation, with an opportunity to request amendment prior to its finalisation.

- 5.5 Dioceses have discretion to vary requirements for ministry reviews in the case of part-time ministers, or a minister experiencing extended illness, on leave, with reduced working hours, or finishing their ministry role during a calendar year, or when they are licensed but not engaged in ministry or in other special circumstances or due to hardship. Any such variation must be approved in writing.
- 5.6 At the conclusion of the ministry review in years one and two, a brief report of goals and development needs should be supplied by the minister to their bishop or their bishop's delegate in the case of clergy, and their employer or their employer's delegate in the case of lay ministers. The review should otherwise remain confidential. In the third-year review, after any agreed amendments are made by the minister and reviewer, a detailed written record of the review should be supplied by the reviewer to both the minister and their bishop or their bishop's delegate in the case of clergy, and their employer or their employer's delegate in the case of lay ministers.

Where a diocese is satisfied that a minister has not, without reasonable excuse, complied with these requirements, it should take appropriate action to ensure compliance.
